Transforming Organizations through Proactive People Management

December 04-06, 2017
MDI Campus, Gurugram
Context
Globalization, technological changes, and the resultant chaotic business environment have led to large-scale changes in organizations. The new business dynamics has generated pressures on all—the top leadership, middle management, and supervisory personnel—to build a facilitative culture that is oriented to customer demands; employee needs; and sustainable business growth. Great organizations are able to develop the capability to align themselves quickly with the internal and external changes that are brought in by the new compulsions. They keep evolving and redesigning themselves for an appropriate response to the changing business scenario. Towards this goal, they focus themselves on building a dynamic structure, engaging culture, organizational leadership brand and the requisite people capabilities. Research reveals that managing change becomes more efficacious if employees’ concerns are addressed along with business issues. The redesigned agendas of some leading organizations even envisage “people first and customer second” focus. These perspectives necessitate organization-building through interventions such as leadership competencies development, responsive organization design, learning organization, employee involvement, attitudinal change programme, and people-centric culture. In terms of developing and internalizing specific skills to move to the next level of organizational growth, this involves, among others, focusing on personal leadership development, ability to nurture psychological contract, developing a caring and fun culture as a way of organizational life, entrepreneurially innovative mindset, ability to bounce back under crisis, emotionally intelligent citizenship, and aligning people issues with business needs.
